As a beginner I don't think the course alone isn't enough and I need to continue with self training.

Maybe try to take a bit more of a developer point of view and needs into account. Try to go through different workflows and use cases what developers and typically facing when doing SW development with Yocto build system.

For beginner it was very informative.

How was the duration of the course?

Definitely too long. : 5 0 0%

I'd like to see / walk through complete solutions

Lab3 text needs revising, it's quite unclear. The training material could show a picture of the created folders and describe how they are used. Now the information is split to several slides and no high level folder tree is shown.

How important are printed materials?

Please tell us why you need or don't need paper printed materials

Electronic material is ok.

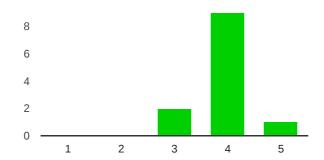

Difficult to search if you're looking for something specific. Good for background info.

In practice it seemed pretty handy

Printed lecture material was quite hard to read and quite brief. Electronic copies with more details, examples etc... may be more usefull. Paper copies are not needed at all.

Printed materials allow to write notes, very important to some of us.

Since the limited amount of test PCs hands on was not possible for everyone.

To focus to learn is practice is very good way.

More time could be used for going through the correct answer. Usually there are more than one solution (right or wrong), so it would be useful to go through different solutions and discuss the differences.

Quite easy for the people with previous yocto experience and good linux skills. For the people without preovious yocto experience, it think labs were quite ok.

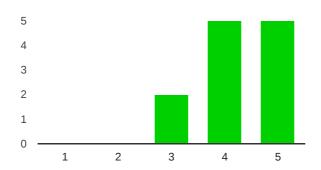

Was enough time dedicated to practical labs?
